

A new light on home automation

When it comes to delivering simple, seamless home automation without disrupting the integrity of the home's design, Control4® is the ideal solution. The Salomon family in Puebla, Mexico, needed an automation solution that would not detract from the aesthetics of their 20,000-square foot sanctuary. Electronics installer Ampliaudio turned to Control4 for help. The result: an elegant system that brings lighting, blinds, home theater, housewide entertainment, and power-saving features together into one simple control panel.

A standard of perfection

When incorporating an automation system to an already stunning house, the Salomons' architect and designer was adamant that any electronics or wires not deter or interfere with the home's design. Amazingly, Ampliaudio was able to use Control4 technology to integrate several audio zones, Apple TV, moving television screens, lights, blinds, and HVAC. The Salomons can even access their security features remotely.

Green design

Adding to the visual appeal of this home are the green features Control4 made possible. Lighting scenes were programmed into the Control4 system—not only for striking effect—but also to save energy. Throughout the home, the blinds and lights complement each other to minimize the amount of energy required to heat or light the home.

Olivia Salomon was over-the-moon about the Control4 system and everything she could accomplish with it. “I love how they created scenes not just for lighting, but for living,” she said.
