

ARIA Resort & Casino at CityCenter Las Vegas

Easy control

From the moment they key into their rooms, guests at the ARIA Resort and Casino at City Center Las Vegas are greeted with a unique automated experience. Open the door, and the lights gradually come on, the drapes open to spectacular views of the city or mountains, and the TV turn on to display a list of automated controls. Using one simple remote, guests can easily set the systems in their room to their personal preferences. Virtually anything in the room can be controlled through the simplicity of a Control4® on-screen interface.

Each room has a 42-inch LCD HDTV, that can be connected to laptops, game consoles, cameras and MP3 players. One gigabit of fiber bandwidth in each guest room delivers unrivaled Wi-Fi connectivity with both the Internet and hotel operations.

A “good night” button next to the bed turns off the lights, TV and/or music; closes the drapes; and turns on the privacy notification for the room. Before calling it a night, guests can select a “wake-up” scene in which lights and music will gradually come on, the temperature in the room comes up, and the drapes open for a more soothing wake-up experience.

Additionally green settings on the Control4 system also allow guests to voluntarily “green their stay,” selecting their preferences for light level, room temperature and the frequency of linen changes.

Energy savings

In-room technology at Aria Resort and Casino at City Center Las Vegas offers an unobtrusive and easy way to conserve precious resources such as energy and water. Control4 Suite Systems can be programmed to automatically shut down a room when it is unoccupied, turning down or off the heating/cooling system, televisions, lights and any appliances.

The wireless nature of the Control4 system nearly eliminates the need for costly conduit and wiring in traditional construction—saving money in construction costs and helping the environment by consuming fewer construction materials.
